

from the literature, and shifts the issue from whether LES are 'good' or 'bad,' and re-focuses it on the question of how they are best used in practice to help in the achievement of specific public health goals, such as the reduction of intakes of free sugars and energy.